In addition to the annual series, there are loads of exciting trials events being planned for the year:

The YMSA is organizing some “Supertrial” events to be held in the Midlands featuring some of the UK’s top riders it should turn out to be a really good spectator event. Also, a two day event at Bracken Rocks.

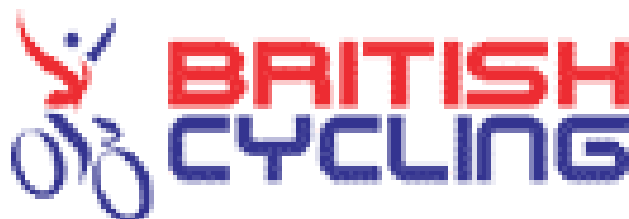

The TykeTrial Club are planning a two-day event at the famous Brimham Rocks venue, including camping. (Members only so get joined up now!)

And we’ve just heard a rumour about another weekend event to be held in the south possibly in August.

In the meantime, there have been two indoor trials parks opened up during the winter, one in Shropshire and one in South Wales. We need more of these around the country, so if you see an open day advertised for them please do try to support!

And last but not least, a new club has just been started, The Bicycle Trials Club of Wales, with their first training day to be held on Saturday 10th April. If you’re local, do give them your support.

More information about all of these events and others coming up can be found on the website – keep checking regularly for up to date information!

Results from the first four rounds of the British National Cup series, and of the Championship event will be used to help select the British UCI World Championship Team for 2010.
